

NORTH ADELAIDE POLICE STATION

61-69 Archer Street

(CD Ref 1724/13)

The police station with residence and lock-up was completed in 1864 for a cost of £385. The builder was J. Wheatley. In 1866 a tender for erecting a veranda was given to William Bunday.

The building replaced a former station in Kermode Street which was built in 1850. The new Archer

Street station was built when there was an upsurge of such buildings throughout South Australia as an important development of the South Australian Police Force.

The station is a good example of its type, built of bluestone with a hipped slate roof, since replaced by corrugated galvanised-iron.
